Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Monday 11 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rain, heavy in northwest. Colder weather spreading south later today.

Today:
Mainly cloudy with further outbreaks of rain, heavy in northwest. Drier, brighter and colder over Northern Isles. Rain will turn to snow on high ground before clearing southwards later this afternoon and evening. Then turning colder with icy stretches forming.

Tonight:
Much of the Country will become dry, clear and cold with a widespread sharp frost and icy stretches. Wintry showers in the north with fresh northwesterly winds easing down.

Tuesday:
A dry, cold day with plenty of crisp winter sunshine. Wintry showers in northeast at first, dying out by afternoon. Northerly winds becoming light.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Bright, cold, much of Wednesday. Rain slowly edging eastwards later Wednesday and Thursday, turning to snow on high ground and possibly lower levels over eastern Scotland. Drier weather following Friday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.